Alerting Officials

1. Determine Forces Needed. Prepare Situation Report. Contact ground team leaders and/or mission aircrews in the order listed, and request needed forces.
2. Ground team leaders will conduct team calls
3. Standby telephone to receive confirmation of team availability from the team captains

All other personnel

1. If you are the first person listed in your team (team captain) contact other team members and the team leader of next team or and relay exact instructions you received.
2. If you are not the first person (team captain) but the first of your team contacted, assume team captain role and contact the remaining team members and captain of next team. Then attempt to contact the team captain again.
3. Call designated alerting official and brief on team availability.
4. Carry out further instructions

Examples

1. The alerting official determines that 14 ground personnel are needed for a mission. He will contact one ground team leader. They will in-turn alert the remaining GTLs. He will also call the captain of Ground Team 1 and instruct them of the number of personnel required and numbers already committed. (If he can't get a hold of the captain, he'll call the next person to the right who will act as team captain.) The team captain will contact all other members of his team. The team captain will then call the team captain of the next team and tell them of the number of required personnel and the total committed. Finally he'll call the alerting officer and inform them of the team availability. The process will continue in team order until 14 ground team personnel are committed.
2. The alerting official wants a two person aircrew and a six person ground team. The alerting official will complete the process above. In addition, he'll contact the team captain for aircrew members. They in turn will contact other aircrew members until they have two qualified persons. After which they contact the alerting official of their status.
